The Season.

The rain fall for the past month has been one inch and five-tenths, consisting of a few light showers. We have had a sharp drought and our crops are suffering for moisture. The weather has been hot, with drying winds during July—the highest themometer was 92 deg, for lowest 49 deg. The struggle for the mastery in Spain, be tween the Repulicans and Monarchists, waxes warm and the indications are that the present efforts to maintain a popular form of government in that country may prove abortive. The Carlists are organizing in almost every prov-ince, have able leaders, and what is of great importance, they have the sympathy and active support of the church. The frequent changes in the Ministry, and the indecision and timidity of the Cortes, show but too plainly the desperate straits into which the Repubcan cause has drifted.

men, but they have not been trained in the unequal to the difficult and trying parts which they are called upon to act. But while the Re publican leaders are able in the Forum there has been a manifest deficiency of military skill. A few able generals thoroughly devoted to the cause of popular government and proof against the wiles and seductions of Priestcraft, cooperating with the Ministry and Legislature, would have imparted to the cause more of the elements of success. The orator and the warrior are rarely united in the same person. The imthers to patriotic deeds, but when the orator took the field he threw down his arms and ignobly ran away at the first sight of the enemy. Castelar is eloquent, but he is not a warrior, and the same is true of his associates in the management of the affairs of the Republic. The Spanish Soldiery are ignorant, superstitions and fickle-minded, while the officers, educated under the auspices of the church, are ever afterwards blindly devoted to her interests. These circumstances have paralyzed the government in her efforts to institute law and order in the Provinces and have rendered any enforcement of the edicts of the Cortes next to ment of France is monarchical in its sympathies, and if it felt itself sufficiently entrene to defy popular sentiment, and could manage only would assistance be afforded the Spanish nsurgents, but the vacant French throne would be speedily re-occupied. Don Carlos belongs to the House of Bourbon, and McMahon the present President of the French Republic, has strong attachment for that house, and was long in the service of a branch of the Bourbon family, in the person of Louis Phillippe.

The deposition of Thiers and the election of McMahon was an important step towards a restoration of the monarchy. While a large section of the sacred soil of France was occupied by German troops, the French rulers realized their humiliation and the Republic was tolerated. But as the German troops are withdrawn, despotism agains rears its head and the hopes become proportionally diminished. If repuben root in the hearts of the people, and not because it receives support from those entrusted with authority; if it thrives it will be because of the generous nature of the soil in which it is planted, and not from the culture anomaly. Divided into factions which are deadly hostile to each other, Bonapartsts, Orleanists and Bourbons in almost equal strength and numbers, giving an unwillingly support to a republic which they naturally despise, because their hatred of each other is stronger. They well know that should the head of either faction succeed to the throne, their chances for royal favors would be even less than they now by the aid of its foes, and there is the merest chance that its principals may become so deep-ly rooted, that bye and bye, its enemies, if they do unite cannot prevail against it.

It may seem strange to some that there i such a total lack of sym-athy between the governments of France and Spain, each of which has adopted a republican form, but this can be accounted for in the fact that while the part of France to accord belligerent rights to jurymen are too busy with their work to at-the rebels in Spain. The French assembly hesitates about complying with this request only because of a fear of the people, and a few more successes of Don Carlos would probably piano, with which the inmates are much compelled to buckle on his armor for real serrolled, and for prudential reasons, it may be proper enough to have a few companies armed and equipped, though we are of the opinion that the benefits which are likely to arise from this outlay are by no means adequate to the expenses which are necessarily incurred.

When our State is deeply in debt and our sitizens are groaning under the burdens of exessive taxation, it seems hardly just to expend thousands of dollars of the people's money, nerely to give an opportunity to the officers to display their new clothes and showy orna-ments. If these sons of Mars are anxious to show themselves to an admiring crowd, why don't they engage some agricultural ground and charge an admission fee to cover the expenses, and not saddle them upon the tax payers of the State, of whom not one in a hundred would be able to witness the show, if they cared to, which we presume they do not.

We do not claim to know much of the Mair Militia: in fact we have been considerably puzsled of late to understand who commands it that the Governor is Commander-in-chief both of the military and militia, but we have recently noticed that orders have been issued to person who has not been Governor for several years. We believe that the Statutes provide that the State shall be divided into three military divisions, each of which shall have a Major General commanding, who shall be responsible only to the Governor. For reasons which we do not comprehend our war vessels become unseaworthy at a much earlier age than our merchantmen. It may be that they are not so well cared for, but it is more probably that they are not so thoroughly built. Under the present method of building our ships and sustaining an efficient navy, it probably costs more than twice what it would to contract the work, and if it cannot be as dred thirty four dollars as the sum expended at well done under the present system, it is high time the system were changed. We can see no reason why these great national establish ments should be kept up, when they only enourage sloth and idleness. Under that inconsistent law of Congress which was passed through the influence of demagogues, the hours of labor in the government shops were

So far as the aggregate amount of labor performed is concerned, it makes little difference whether the working hours in the government shops are eight or ten, for there is but preciou little work done any way. Businkess Confidence in Boston. A Boston correspondent to the New York Post thus speaks of the confidence of the leading men of Boston:

"When one is met on all sides with the proofs and results of enormous disturbances made by the fire in all things—in markets, in real estate, in personal relations, in business connections, in confidence, in wealth, in associations—it is truly astonishing to lister to the tone of the merchants and public men. It is as buoyant as one could imagine it might be in case a great calamity. The total absolute escape of $75,000,000 into air really appears to have lightened the Bostonians of a burden which had hitherto oppressed them and kept their spirits."

The coal speculators now make no secret of the fact that they are the masters of the situation and can place the price at any figure they please. The average advance of price is twenty-five per cent and this is hardly a commencement of what the great ring propose to do. It is practically the greatest monopoly in the world. The transportation routes, the coal fields, the miners and their strikes, are all within their control; consequently they can as easily make the price of coal $20 per ton as half that sum during the coming winter. Already the activity in the great iron producing interest of the country is checked, and other industries will suffer in consequence. It is said that this ring embraces many British capitalists who own both iron and coal mines at home, and are making use of their power to paralyze the industries of this country that come in competition with their home productions.

A reporter was on the scene ten minutes after the accident occurred, and it was simply combustion among the jute and gunny bags and hemp with which that part of the building was filled. Another and more probable theory for the origin of the fire assigns it to the carelessness of a couple of slaters who had been at work in the building above the arch where the fire was first discovered, for several days past. Just before the alarm was thought at first that these ladies had been struck they left the building, and have not been seen since. Both were smokers, and were aggerated. It was stated on authority that the reporter made diligent inquiries and learned

A woman of no mean disposition, she had merely succumbed tolthe custom of the society in which she moved, forgetful, that, owing to the position she held, a word of hers weighed a great deal in the estimation of others. Her husband's rebuke had touched her, and for the first time in her life she realized bow deep an injury she might do another by an unjust word. Ah! the unjust word had been spoken that day, and on the morrow, while Mrs. Lester shopped in the city, the minister's wife received an unusual number of callers.

"Harry," she said, "they all noticed my vase and admired it so much. One lady told me that antique ware was quite the style now, and concluded my present must have been vory costly. It is beautiful, isn't it? but not half so beautiful as the true love that gave it to me!"

At that'moment Mrs. Lester drove up to the minister with his arm around his wife standing before the bracket. It looked like another proof toward the truthlof her story; but recalling her husband's words, she entered the parsonage with more of kindliness in her heart than she had ever carried there before.

CATARRH Cannot be cured by snuffs, washes or local applications. It is a weakness of the constitution, developing itself in the massl organs first, afterwards extending to throat and lungs, ending generally in Cousumption, if not checked by proper remedies. Pains in head, back, loins and weakness of kidneys are its attendant diseases. More people have Catarrh than any other disease. It is easily cured. Thousands of cases, some of thirty-five years' standing, have been entirely oured in New Hampshire the past three years by the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy. Cruifficate to back the above, and a treatise on Catarrh in a 32-pase pamphlet, sent free on application to Littlefield & Hayes, druggists, proprietors. Manchester, N. H.
